La Déclaration d' Istanbul sur le tourisme

... and trafficking of organs,
a Summit Meeting of representatives of scientific and medical bodies from around the world, and including government officials, social scientists, and ethicists.

The DECLARATION of ISTANBUL

on ORGAN TRAFFICKING and TRANSPLANT TOURISM

- Définitions
- Principes
- Propositions de stratégies pour
 - Lutter contre le trafic d'organes, le tourisme de transplantation et le commerce de transplantation
 - Soutenir les programmes de transplantation

The DECLARATION of ISTANBUL

DEFINITIONS

- Trafic d'organes: consiste à rechercher, transporter, transférer, détenir ou réceptionner des personnes vivantes ou décédées ou leurs organes en faisant usage de menaces, de violence, ou de toute autre forme de coercition ou d'enlèvement, par la fraude ou la tromperie, par abus de pouvoir ou en mettant à profit la vulnérabilité des individus; c'est aussi le fait de donner ou de recevoir en tant que tierce partie un paiement ou tout autre forme de bénéfice, pour conduire un donneur à se laisser exploiter par le prélèvement de ses organes en vue d'une transplantation.
- Commerce de transplantation: c'est une politique ou une pratique au cours de laquelle un organe est traité comme une marchandise, notamment en étant acheté ou vendu, ou utilisé en vue d'un gain matériel.

DEFINITIONS

- Voyage pour transplantation: c'est le déplacement des organes, des donneurs, des receveurs ou des professionnels de la transplantation au delà de frontières, dans un objectif de transplantation. Le voyage pour transplantation devient du
- Tourisme de transplatation: s'il implique du trafic d'organes et/ou du commerce de transplantation, ou si les ressources utilisées pour la transplantation de patients venant de l'extérieur d'un pays (qu'il s'agisse d'organes, de professionnels ou de centres de transplantation) réduisent les capacités de ce pays à répondre aux besoins de transplantation de sa propre population.

The DECLARATION of ISTANBUL

Principes:

1. Les gouvernements nationaux, en collaboration avec les organisations

2. Une législation compatible avec les normes internationales doit être élaborée et

3. Les organes destinés à être transplantés doivent être alloués

4. L'objectif principal de la politique et des programmes de transplantation doit viser

5. Les Juridictions, les pays et les régions doivent s'efforcer d'atteindre l'auto-suffisance en termes de don d'organes en mettant

6. Le trafic d'organes et le tourisme de transplantation violent les principes d'égalité, de justice et de respect de la dignité humaine et doivent être interdits.

Le commerce de transplantation doit être interdit car il mène inexorablement à l'inégalité et à l'injustice, dans la mesure où il vise des donneurs vulnérables, qu'ils soient pauvres ou non.

Declaration of Istanbul

Society of Nephrology (ISN) in Dubai in December 2007. That committee's draft declaration was widely circulated and then revised in light of the comments received. At the Summit, the revised draft was reviewed by working groups and finalized in plenary deliberations.

This Declaration represents the consensus of the Summit participants. All countries need a legal and professional framework to govern.

Personal Viewpoint

A Criminological Perspective: Why Prohibition of Organ Trade Is Not Effective and How the Declaration of Istanbul Can Move Forward

The Declaration of Istanbul is the first document that has been established by the international transplant community that defines and prohibits transplant commercialism and organ trafficking. Its Custodian Group has successfully led various countries to implement legislation against trafficking and commercialism. The question arises, however, whether efforts to prohibit organ trade are realistic and effective

First of all, to tackle and prevent organ trade, the root cause of the problem (organ scarcity) should be addressed. This ultimately means boosting organ supply. One such strategy that the Declaration already strongly supports is to help governments implement deceased donation programs to increase deceased donation rates and achieve self-sufficiency.

The WHO and Custodian Group should therefore, secondly, also encourage expansion of living donation in the same manner as they encourage deceased donation.

The Custodian Group and WHO should, furthermore, encourage governments to remove restrictions regarding living unrelated or anonymous donation to make alternative living donation programs possible

A final example is to support regulated trials of incentives for donation.

This asks for a more liberal approach by both the WHO and the Declaration towards commercialism.

In our opinion, there is no validation for the Declaration's and WHO's premise that commercialism should be banned because it leads to profiteering and trafficking.

Trafficking will occur as long as scarcity exists, with or without prohibition. A more realistic approach would, hence, be the implementation of harm-reduction policies as witnessed in drug and prostitution regimes.

Incentives for donation may, perhaps, be promising examples of a harm-reduction approach. The Declaration should provide scope for governments to explore ways to increase donation through incentives.
